Jung's work has found one of its most important applications in literature and the arts. Artists of every field have used his ideas to understand the creative process and to spark their own creativity. This season, we are excited to present a series of performances that reflect our theme for the coming year: "Contemporary Applications of Jungian Ideas to Creativity and the Arts."

Changes

An informal survey indicated our membership prefers to meet closer to the city center and on Monday evenings. So, unless otherwise indicated, our monthly presentations will be held on Mondays at the following address:

KEYSTONE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
5019 KEYSTONE PLACE N.

A fee of $3.00 per person will be charged to non-members attending the monthly meeting/lectures.

CREATIVITY AND PSYCHOSYNTHESIS
By Ed Turner

Monday, October 4, 7:30 p.m.
Keystone Congregational Church

Jung believed the symbol provides the psychological machinery that transmutes energy. Roberto Assagioli, the Italian psychiartrist who founded psychosynthesis, saw symbols as conductors of psychical energies, and found them fundamental to the creative process. As the Lotus plant, through the life-giving energy of the sun transmutes the mud and water of the pond into a flower, so symbols can focus and inspire our own creative genius.

Ed Turner, founder and director of High Point Northwest, received his Doctor's Degree in religion and studied psychosynthesis under Dr. Assagioli. He emphasizes unconditional love in human relationships to balance the emphasis in the West on human will.

TUESDAY, October 19, 8:00 p.m.
INTIMAN THEATER
1419 8th (between Pike & Union)

Intiman Theatre's October presentation of August Strindberg's A Dream Play should be of special interest to Jungians. Written in 1901, the play's theme on the impact of reality on dreams had Strindberg seeking to reproduce the "disconnected but apparently logical form of a dream in fifteen scenes," where "anything can happen, everything is possible and probable."

Open to both members and non-members, our group rate is $7.00 per person (regular price is $12.00). We will need at least 10 people to get this rate, so won't you please join us by sending in the form at the end of this newsletter. Please mail by October 10, so that your tickets can be mailed back to you in time.

MATTER OF HEART
A NEW FILM ABOUT THE WORLD OF
CARL GUSTAV JUNG

Thursday, November 11, 7:30 p.m.
Kane Hall Auditorium, University of Washington.

The Friends of Jungian Psychology is sponsoring the Seattle premier of this exciting, new feature length documentary on Jung. The film is peopled with those who were closest to Jung--as students, patients, friends, relatives and neighbors. The settings are their settings--San Francisco, New York, London, Zurich and Bollingen--where they live and work and where they knew Jung. The themes embrace the everyday realities and conflicts they shared with Jung, the mysteries of working through problems in marriage or the analyst-patient relationship and the courage and patience to engage the reality of the collective unconscious.

The film's creators will fly in from Los Angeles for this event to give a brief commentary on their personal insights and experiences in creating the film.

A members only reception will be held after the film. An October mailing will contain ticket price and further details.

DRAMATIZED POETRY PRESENTATIONS:

SAINTS AND TRICKSTERS
By ERICA HELM MEADE
THE LADY OF THE FOUNTAIN
By MICHAEL MEADE

Monday, January 19, 7:30 p.m.
Keystone Congregational Church

Saints and Tricksters is a medley of anecdotes on the lives of beloved saints and fools from such traditions as Native America, Mexico, Catholic Ireland and Italy, the Moslem Mideast, Tibet and China. The tale explores the glimmer of mischief in the eye of the Saint, and the spark of divinity in the soul of the fool.

The Lady of the Fountain, a tale that arose among the ancient Celts and reached its finished form as a medieval romance, tells of the adventures of a single-hearted hero endowed with intuitive powers but blind with unconsciousness. The hero is initiated into the central mysteries of life only to become spellbound. Awakened later, he returns to his former life only to completely forget his initiation. So he must undertake the quest again to achieve a mature initiation.

Erica Helm Meade has a Bachelor of Arts degree in poetry, is a published poet, and has told poems and stories throughout the United States for many years. Michael Meade received a B.A. in literature and combines his studies of mythology and rhythm instruments with telling poems.

Board Meeting

The next Board Meeting will be Tuesday, October 12, 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mardonna Austin-McKillop, 6822 15th N.E. (522-3208). We will be making final plans for our November 11 presentation of Matter of Heart. All interested members are invited to attend. We are actively seeking individuals who have the time and interest to serve on the board. Interested? Please attend this meeting!

Centerpoint Coteries I & II

Centerpoint Coteries are small groups which meet to listen to and discuss a series of tapes prepared by the Centerpoint Foundation. This is an excellent way to get some technical information and personal insight into Jungian concepts.

For further information contact Bunny Brown, 622-2375 or 525-3487.
